It's me, Mama, can't you see?

Please wake up and recognize me.

I search your eyes so empty and blue,

Hoping for a flicker of what used to be you.

In my world you used to play,

Now roles are reversed I'm in yours today.

I'll care for you, Mama and I'll hold your hand,

Waiting for the day before Jesus we stand.

For only then will the bright light burn,

You'll see our family and your memory will return.

You may not know me as the child you bore,

But you'll always be the mother I totally adore.
